The Centre for Rural Criminology call for members

The Centre for Rural Criminology at the University of New England (UNE) was created in 2019. The Centre's primary goal is to bring together interdisciplinary scholars, higher degree research students, practitioners, organisations and communities to support collaborative national and international multi-disciplinary research and the publishing of scholarly work into areas of national and global significance.

Together, the Centre's researchers and partners will study the most compelling social problems which impact upon rural communities. To this end, the Centre aims to lead research in this burgeoning field, inform progressive policies related to rural crime and produce valuable information that can enhance the health and well-being of rural communities.

The Centre is now inviting interested researchers to become Research Associates. This is not a paid appointment; however, the Centre provides a number of important benefits to associates:

- Provides affiliation to a quality research environment to support funding and Fellowship applications.
- Offers opportunities for joint research, grant applications, workshops etc.
- Connects individuals to those with an interest in rural crime and society and foster collaboration.
- Features up-to-date work in our biannual electronic newsletter and on our website and social media accounts.
- Aids in disseminating information about any events relevant to the study of rural crime and society.

Further information on the Centre can be found on the Centre for Rural Criminology website. If you are interested in becoming a member of the Centre, please send through your details (name, position title and affiliation) as well as a brief description of how your research aligns with the Centre to the Secretary, Jenny Wise at rucrim@une.edu.au.

Best wishes,

Jenny Wise
